Life Happens While You're Planning Other Things By Carole Devine

A couple years ago I noticed that I would have a solar arc square from Pluto to Mars in April 2008. Since Mars is in the 8th house, I thought (worst case) maybe I'd die or at the very least be diagnosed with a terminal illness. Since Mars rules the 12th, I thought maybe I'd have to be hospitalized or put into a nursing home. After all, I'll be 69 on April 1st, so it wasn't out of the question. The best case scenario would be a total transformation (Pluto) of the subconscious (12th house) regarding other people's control (8th house). Since the 12th house is also isolation, I thought perhaps I could dictate how this would go by isolating myself and learning about investments (8th house). I thought that was pro-active. ☺

Furthermore, I had just listened to a CD called "Detecting Death with Solar Returns" by Dorothy Figg (available from www.a-ctapes.com) and my solar return, starting later this month, had many of the features—Pluto right on the ascendant, ruled by Saturn, and Saturn in the 8th among other things. And who knows? I may yet kick the bucket!

Having been born with Uranus on the ascendant, my life has been a hectic one of constant change. I no sooner get settled in one direction when something happens to make it necessary to change toward another. Usually, it's caretaking or a relationship where it is easier for me to move than the other person. I just bought this house 15 months ago, and thought that finally I would be able to settle down, paint works of art, write and grow some flowers.

Not the case. My mother had a heart attack on March 3rd and cannot be left alone, so I have to move to where she is living and stay for the duration, however long that is. I'm the only one who can do it. My house will be rented and things put in storage.

I believe there is always a lesson in all of our experiences, and maybe mine is acceptance that my life is to be lived in service to other people. (12th house Sun with dispositor in the 8th and north node in the 6th in Scorpio) That is really not a bad thing and probably appropriate for an Aries!

The "two for one" sale – an adjustment

Since the next six weeks will be so full of hard work, I'm adjusting this sale. This was another "pro-active" way I was using the Pluto/Mars square, since it also indicates hard work and effort. If you are one of those who has already ordered your chart with the first offer, we will do it that way. However, with the pressure of what is going on, I will find it hard to do two charts for every person who wants to take advantage of this. But, to be fair (since I already put it out there) I will, instead, offer charts at half price. It amounts to the same thing. I never take short cuts or rush doing charts, so despite the move, you will get a quality product. It just will take a little longer. If you order and pay for the work before May 1st, you can have this price, even if the chart is scheduled sometime in May or June. I have to speak at UAC in May, so much of that month is occupied.

If you are local to where I live now—the Hampton Roads area of Virginia, we can schedule in-person sessions before I leave. If you are in the DC/Baltimore/Annapolis, MD area, where I'll be going, we can schedule sessions there after May 1st.

My cell phone number has been the same since late 2000, and the website and its email address, carole@devineadvantage.com, have been the same since 1998. Those are constants and the best way to make contact.

Hillary at Inauguration Time

I've been asked about Hillary's a.m. birth time and what it shows about inauguration time. Since I'm going to be lecturing about Tertiary progressions at UAC, I thought I'd include that method for this. It does require an exact birth time. Incidentally, Obama's birth time is very "iffy." There are various times conjectured, so that is a lost cause, at least right now.

Using the 8:02 a.m. time for Hillary, the outlook is great. The tertiary MC changes signs in October/late September and immediately conjoins her natal Jupiter. A boost in her popularity should be quite evident then. At election time, the tertiary Jupiter is conjunct the tertiary Ascendant. At the inauguration, Venus is rising by tertiary (very happy), and her natal Mars/Pluto conjunction is on the descendant exactly—indicating determination, hard work, commitment, etc.

Plus, at the inauguration time in the traditional methods, her progressed Sun is trine the MC (a pinnacle of success), and solar arc Jupiter squares her Sun—also a success indicator. Solar arc Ascendant and Mercury are trining the North Node indicating a happy karmic circumstance successfully undertaken. Remember, this is all predicated on the time of birth being correct to the minute.
